EXPENSES · USING YOUR CAR FOR WORK

A business mile in your own car is worth up to 55p.

If you are self-employed and use your own car for work, you do not have to keep every fuel receipt. You take a flat amount off your profit per mile — and the amount drops after the first 10,000.

WHAT YOU TAKE OFF, MILE BY MILE

55p

55p a mile for your first 10,000 business miles in a tax year, then 25p for every mile after that. On a motorcycle it is 24p from the first mile.

> Travel between home and work does not count — only travel for the work itself. The first 10,000 miles were 45p until 5 April 2026.

WHO CANNOT USE THE FLAT RATE

Black cab

Cars designed for commercial use — black cabs, hackney carriages, dual-control driving instructors' cars — are outside the flat rate altogether. So is any vehicle whose cost already came off your profits.

> One method or the other, never both. And once you use the flat rate for a vehicle, you keep it for that vehicle.

EXPENSES · USING YOUR CAR FOR WORK

Not sure how the miles count?

Message us and we will go through what you can claim on the vehicle. No obligation.

0330 133 1886

General information. For your own situation, speak to an accountant.